Subject: * * The Big Tucson Mineral Auction Closes Tomorrow * *

Only Today and Tomorrow Left to Bid!

The current Tucson Show Mineral Auction will begin closing tomorrow night on Thursday, June 6th at 9 PM central. There is no better time than now for all participants to check on their current bids, make additional bids, or place new bids for the first time. This has been an unusually slow auction and it isn't from a lack of quality specimens. Normally auctions begin to get a little slow during the summer months and that's when the major bargains can be found. There are some incredible show items in this auction so please feel free to take advantage of the low prices and bid as many times as you like!

It's hard to believe, but these fine specimens still need opening bids!....

Classic combo of Aurichalcite, yellow Smithsonite, and Rosasite from Arizona
Gorgeous Rhodochrosite miniature plate from the Sweet Home Mine
A RARE Halite crystals on Gypsum from Poland
Gorgeous crystalline Gold on Quartz from the Eagle's Nest Mine
RARE combo of pink tipped Spodumene crystals with Goshenite Beryl
MUSEUM QUALITY Native Wire Silver from Freiberg, Germany
Chalcedony stalactites from Indonesia
Native Silver crystals on Native Copper from Michigan

Scheelite crystals on Quartz with Muscovite from China
Tri-colored Tourmaline crystals from Pakistan
Rare specimen featuring Rutile crystals on Limonite from North Carolina
Orange Orpiment on Barite crystals from Peru
MUSEUM QUALITY Native Gold on pink Feldspar from the Nugget Pond Mine
(This locality is closed and specimens of this calibre are extremely rare)
Iridescent dendrites of Native Silver from Batopilas
Cabinet sized Malachite ps after Malachite with Quartz from Zacatecas

I look at these specimens and I have to seriously scratch my head as to why they don't have bids or offers. These are some of the finest pieces from Tucson and all have a very low "suggested" reserve. Make a bid or offer and see what happens. When auctions are slow, your chances of winning increase dramatically.
